As candidate compounds for medicine, they have to show good balance between high inhibitory activities and desirable ADMET properties. Several ADMET end points are measured routinely and then prediction for their values in advance is crucial for efficient lead optimization.

We have built ADMET local models using MOE descriptors and statistical package R. Furthermore, we have developed Web GUI for chemists, who can make designs of any interesting molecules in desktop PC.