

AI tools for chemical synthesis and chemistry automation

Mikhail Kabeshov

AstraZeneca, Göteborg, Sweden

This talk presents the artificial intelligence (AI) and machine learning (ML) tools employed at AstraZeneca to facilitate chemical synthesis and library design. Specifically, it will describe tools that enable the prediction of reaction feasibility and suggest initial conditions tailored for parallel synthesis settings. Additionally, an approach that incorporates AI-driven library design, informed by chemical synthesis expertise, will be described.